Key Takeaways

Reiterate OW APO given scope for growth re-acceleration and continued confidence in the path ahead to 20%+ fee-related earnings (FRE) growth and 10% annual SRE growth with performance fee income that should benefit from a cap markets recovery that's already underway. This combined should support 16% EPS CAGR from 2025-28. We see an attractive entry point here given discount vs peers (APO trading a ~14x 2027 PE multiple vs broader alts trading at 19.5x) and view APO as an attractive way to play continued growth in private credit (despite near-term cautious sentiment) in the context of a more constructive macro outlook for the year ahead. Furthermore, we see APO as well placed to benefit from inclusion of alts in 401(k)/DC plans given regulatory clarity on the horizon that should catalyze flows. APO is also poised to benefit from increased allocation to alts by the private wealth channel given strong brand, broad product offering, and established partnerships.

What We Learned from the 4Q Earnings Call:

1. Earnings power continues to accelerate and clarity on the forward-look across earnings streams - SRE, FRE, and PII - supports our expectation for continued growth in 2026 and 2027.
    a. Spread related earnings (SRE) is poised to inflect and grow, supported by net spread stability and continued asset growth; Notably mgmt reiterated their 10% annual SRE growth expectation through 2029, and reiterated their 10% growth expectation specifically for 2026 which implies ~$3.85b of SRE in 2026 assuming 11% alts return. Building blocks to this growth include; 1) continued liability growth at Athene to expand the spread-earnings asset base (with ~$85b of inflows expected in 2026, up from $83b in 2025); 2) Continued net spread in the 120-125bps area which we think is achievable given mgmt's focus on net spread and asset earning potential vs the cost of writing liabilities; and 3) an origination-driven ability to source incremental spread assets while maintaining underwriting discipline and ~mid teens ROE target. We view this year's 10% SRE growth as somewhat de-risked and supported by the previously announced ARI portfolio purchase (~$9bn of commercial mortgage assets) that should offer ~50-75bps of incremental spread vs new-issue. Could this lead to upside relative to the 10% growth target in 2026? Possibly - but at this point in the year we think that upside is more limited as they may share economics with customers which supports overall liability growth, while the portfolio purchase could displace other SRE lending.
    b. 20%+ Fee-Related Earnings (FRE) growth target in 2026 reiterated which supports our view that APO should be able to drive sustained FRE growth ahead given well-established core businesses (ABF, direct lending, multi-credit, and hybrid) with further support from newer initiatives such (Apollo Sports Capital and Athora's pending PIC acquisition). We expect durable origination scale, higher base of fee-generating AUM, and strong capital solutions fees to drive 22% FRE growth in 2026, accelerating to 24% in 2027.
    c. Principal Investment Income (PII) is also set to support earnings growth ahead, with mgmt reiterating their expectation for PII of ~$900m on average annually from 2024-29. Realized performance fees of $588m in the qtr were helped by 1xers including Fund X that saw catch-up after exceeding its escrow ratio, seasonal credit hedge fund crystalization, and a portfolio liquidation event at Accord+. As such, we expect a more normalized realized performance fee level of $248m in 1q26 absent any 1xers. Mgmt emphasized that the path to $900m PII could be lumpy given dependence on exit multiples as well as pace of deal activity. Given the current backdrop, we're optimistic that mgmt can execute on deal pipelines as capital markets activity continues to build and look for $370m of PII in 2026 (up 9% y/y).

2. Continued focus on expanding TAM to serve the 6 target end markets, an expansion from the legacy institutional market:
   a. Institutions - Institutional channel fundraising in 2025 was the highest non-flagship year on record and the channel is poised to see further acceleration with growth increasingly driven outside the traditional alts bucket. Institutional demand continues to expand into fixed income replacement, investment-grade private credit, AAA/PRIV, and portfolio-level solutions, a shift that we feel should favor large, scaled managers with strength in origination like APO.
   b. Individuals / Private Wealth - We continue to see the global wealth channel as a key growth engine for APO with $18b+ flows and 9 strategies exceeding $500m and 3 strategies with over $1b+ in annual fundraising in 2025. We expect this momentum to continue into 2026, especially as individuals are still in early days of allocating their portfolios to alternatives and expect APO's partnerships with State Street (covered by Betsy Graseck) and now Schroders (covered by Marina Massuti) to further accelerate growth here.
   c. Insurance - We see strong momentum at Athene and expect that continues into 2026 supported by robust demand for retirement income and continued channel diversification. We look for ~$86bn of inflows in 2026 (vs mgmt's guide for ~$85b and up from $83b in 2025), with ~$5b of this expected to come from markets that are new to Athene (e.g., 401k/retirement, structured settlements and stable value) that's underscored by our confidence in APO's ability to push into new liability channels while retail and funding agreement channels likely see continued strength. Athene's strong origination capabilities and ability to maintain attractive economics leads us to see APO/Athene as best placed to capture growth from the insurance channel. Positive legal and regulatory developments could re-open the pension group annuities channel to APO which has been dormant for some time but showed signs of life in 4Q and this channel rebounds we'd expect Athene to throttle back on the funding agreement backed notes (FABN) channel.
   d. Debt and equity buckets for institutional clients - A whole portfolio approach is opening both debt and equity buckets of institutional portfolios to private assets, creating a much larger opportunity set than traditional alternatives alone. We feel that institutional flows could accelerate over time as this framework gains traction.
   e. Traditional asset managers - Mgmt sees traditional asset managers as becoming one of the largest incremental demand pools for private markets. In order to tap into this, alt managers are adapting product design to facilitate daily NAV and daily liquidity. APO is making progress in this area, and yesterday announced a strategic partnership with Schroders that's aimed at developing innovative wealth and retirement investment solutions by bringing together Schroders' active mgmt experience in public mkts and specialist capabilities across private markets with the expertise of APO's private mkts platform. Mgmt expects the partnership could scale to multi-billion dollars of AUM, confidence supported by the success so far of other initiatives including PRIV (APO's ETF developed in partnership with State Street) that is approaching $700m and performing well amongst investment-grade ETFs. APO also emphasized their open-architecture stance as a product supplier to numerous traditional asset managers. Thus, we would not be surprised if APO continues to pursue partnerships with traditional asset managers to capture growth from the traditional asset mgmt channel.

f. 401(k) - The DC/401(k) opportunity is large, poised to unlock pending imminent rulemaking and clearer guidance. Activity levels are extremely strong with regulatory discussions at an all time high and we expect a rulemaking from the DOL in the coming days/weeks that can unlock access to Alts in retirement as well as annuities/lifetime income. We see an underappreciated component of the policy backdrop as the potential opening of 401(k) plans to guaranteed lifetime income, which aligns with Athene's retirement-income capabilities. We continue to see daily NAV and daily liquidity as the key that unlocks the opportunity in addition to rulemaking/guidance (that we expect to come in the very near term) and see APO as among the best placed to benefit once large volumes start to come through.

3. Origination spreads in the year were strong, with IG generating excess spread of 290bps over Treasuries or ~220bps over rated corporates in the index. On sub-IG, APO generated excess spread of 490bps over Treasuries or ~200bps over comparably rated high-yield corporates. Notably, spreads were stable q/q and also throughout the course of the year which is noteworthy in the current mkt environment where public spreads remained near multi-decade tights. APO's ability to generate excess spread at a broad scale while maintaining quality supports our view that APO has the ability to drive differentiated origination via breadth of solutions. Blended net spread ex notables was 120bps in 4Q25 primarily reflecting asset prepayments and mostly offset by new business growth and higher return on the alts portfolio. When considering an 11% normalized alts return, net spread in the qtr would have been four basis points higher at 124bps.
4. Software exposure is low amongst peers with no exposure in the PE business, and less than ~0.5% exposure on the Athene balance sheet. Software investments within APO's credit business excluding Athene represents less than 4% of AUM, and within their non-traded BDC, ADS, software exposure is at the low end vs peers at ~13% (which we outlined in our note here). Mgmt emphasized their underwriting posture that is designed to de-risk portfolios with first-lien structures with negligible software PIK exposure and ARR loan exposure as well as negligible exposure to pre-2021/2022 software vintages across their direct landing platform that all in has ~low double digit aggregate software exposure. See updated commentary from peers below:

Exhibit 1: We see APO and BAM as among the least exposed to Software, based on mgmt commentary, but acknowledge not all software exposure is created equal, and there are also opportunities elsewhere in portfolios from AI, including investments around the build-out of AI infrastructure and portfolio companies harnessing AI to accelerate growth and efficiency

Company	Software Commentary
APO	• APO has no exposure to software in their PE business, less than 0.5% on the Athene balance sheet, and less than 4% in credit ex-Athene • Aggregate software exposureis ~low double digit % of total direct lending portfolio with negligible PIK and IRR exposure • Vintage risk is also limited, with a negligible amount of software exposure in pre-2021-2022 vintages
BAM	• Software exposure across the organization is "very minimal", reflecting its focus on long-term contracted real assets rather than technology risk. • <1% of the private equity portfolio is invested in software businesses. • BAM's credit strategies are concentrated in infrastructure, real estate credit, real-asset lending and asset-backed finance, with no software exposure in those areas. • Opportunistic credit strategies have very little software exposure, while performing credit strategies are significantly underweight software relative to indices. • Mgmt emphasized AI-driven disruption is a strong net positive for BAM due to its scale in digital infrastructure and power, reinforcing rather than impairing earnings outlook.
HLNE	• HLNE does not have concentration across portfolios in software, given its diversified co-investment, secondary, and fund-of-funds style exposure rather than single-asset ownership. • Management said software exposure is "not a topic…that we see as at all of an issue" for either HLNE or its clients. • HLNE highlighted the possibility of M&A between "new tech" and legacy software providers, where incumbents retain customer relationships that AI-native firms may lack. • Mgmt acknowledged that some software businesses acquired pre-COVID at high valuations may struggle, but noted many software companies continue to grow and add customers.
ARES	• Software investments represent ~6% of total AUM and <9% of private credit AUM (inclusive of real asset lending; excluding liquid credit) and 12% of direct lending credit strategies. • Exposure is nearly all senior secured loans, with private equity sponsors in the first-loss position. • Software loans are underwritten at lower LTVs (high-30% range) versus mid-40% LTVs for the rest of the portfolio. • ARR-based loans <1% of global direct lending exposure; software non-accruals are close to zero. • ARES typically passes on 95-97% of deals and imagine similar selectivity in software • As a balance-sheet-light manager, Ares has negligible look-through software exposure on its own balance sheet; any credit losses would have limited impact on management fees and earnings.
CG	• Software is ~6% of total AUM broadly defined • On the CLO side, exposure is roughly in line with the index and recent volatility is not expected to affect CG's CLOs • Mgmt reiterated that softwaere is "not a piston in the engine" of CG's strategy, and notes that software has never beein a big driver for CG vs other areas like aerospace & defense, healthcare, and industrials
KKR	• Software exposure is ~7% of AUM, using a "highly inclusive" definition, which management emphasized is well below industry peers and public equity and credit indices • AI-driven disruption risk has been a focus for several years, not a new concern prompted by recent market volatility • Not all software assets are the same, citing a recent portfolio company exit at a ~30% premium and ~4.5x MOIC as evidence of selective, high-quality exposure • KKR noted that its $118bn of dry powder materially exceeds any areas of AI-related concern, positioning the firm to capitalize on volatility rather than be constrained by it
OWL (not covered)	• Mgmt notes software loans represent ~8% of total AUM, underscoring that exposure is manageable and diversified. • There has been no material change in non-accruals, amendments, or credit metrics tied to software exposure; overall net realized loss rates remain very low (around 8 bps). • OWL stressed that as a first-lien lender, material losses would require an extreme and implausible destruction (~70%) of enterprise value across software borrowers, which management views as inconsistent with current fundamentals. • Software and tech lending portfolios are characterized as the most pristine within OWL's broader credit book, supported by low leverage and large equity cushions (average ~30% LTV). • OWL emphasized that its software exposure is not concentrated in vulnerable application-layer software, but instead focused on companies with deep integration, data moats, regulatory complexity, and mission-critical business processes (e.g., healthcare, financial services).
TPG	• Software is 11% of total AUM, majority in PE and minimum exposure in credit • In the direct lending business, TPG focused on sponsor-backed companies with strong cash flow profiles and lend at the top of the capital structure, so TPG is not heavily invested in the software sector. Software makes up ~2% of credit AUM • Software is 18% of PE AUM, but TPG has a longstanding presence that gives them a deep expertise and nuanced perspective, investing in software companies where AI is an opportunity (systems of record software, vertical software with data moats, cybersecurity, etc).
STEP	• Across the entire firm, STEP estimates ~11% of total AUM is invested in software. Excluding venture, software exposure declines to ~7% of total AUM. • Real estate and infra strategies have no software exposure, private credit has moderate exposure (software exposure in private credit evergreen funds is mid-to-high single digits), and PE and venture are the primary sources of software exposure across the firm which we infer low 20s% exposure in PE/VC based on above disclosure. • Mgmt emphasized diversification as the primary mitigant to software and AI-related disruption risk, highlighting its multi-manager, multi-asset-class portfolio construction. • Not all software companies are created equal, differentiating between vulnerable SaaS models and software with vertical specialization, proprietary data, or strong AI strategies. • Within venture (including SPRING), STEP has tilted exposure toward AI-beneficiaries such as pure-play AI, AI infrastructure, specialized vertical software, cybersecurity, defense tech, and physical AI • Mgmt noted that venture software exposure should not be viewed as a bet on "legacy" or generic SaaS, pointing to SPRING's 39% performance despite public cloud software indices being down sharply.
Industry*	• Private Equity Industry exposure to IT Services broadly is ~27% of activity past 5-yrs, while Software specifically just over 20% across Buyout (bit higher in large/global buyout at ~24% and lower in small/mid market ~13%), while higher in Venture. • Private Credit Direct Lending exposure to Software likely similar to the exposure in Buyout PE, with greater exposure in the larger end of the market. Notably, asset-based finance, private IG/fixed income replacement likely has much lower exposure to software, particularly given some of the end makrets are unrelated to software; eg aircraft leasing, litigation finance, CRE lending, etc.

Guidance Reiterated for 1) 20%+ FRE growth in 2026 (MSe and cons 22%), with ~low double digit expenses in non-comp costs and ~high teens comp growth in 2026 and expect ~100bps FRE margin expansion annually (MSe +208bps vs cons +120bps expansion from 2025 to 2026) 2) 10% annual SRE growth through 2029, including 10% in 2026, assuming 11% normalized alts return (MSe 11% growth in 2026 vs cons 12%), supported by ~$85b of fundraising at Athene in 2026 (MSe $86b) and net spread in the ~120-125bps area, 3) $900m of PII in on average from 2024-29e, though likely not linear (MSe $370m vs cons $396), and 4) Tax rate of ~20% on a multi-yr basis (MSe and cons both ~19% in 2026), 4Q25 Results: APO reported EPS of $2.47, a 46c beat versus MSe of $2.01 and a 44c beat versus cons of $2.03. Fee-Related Earnings of $690m came in 6c above MSe and 2c above cons driven by better-than-expected management and transaction fees and partially offset by higher expenses. Principal Investing Income was +22c better than MSe and +21c better than consensus driven by realized performance fees beat and partially offset by compensation. Fee-paying AUM of $709b was above MSe ($690b) and cons ($708b). Fundraising of $42b in the quarter was stronger than MSe $32b but softer versus consensus of $43b.

What We Changed: We raise 2026 EPS estimates by +1.0% to $9.45 (from $9.36) and raise 2027 EPS estimates by +0.6% to $11.41 (from $11.35). Our PT of $181 is +1% or +$1 vs prior and reflects a target P/E multiple of 15.9x on '27 EPS estimates. Our fundraising ests are largely unchanged vs prior in 2026 and 2027, but mgmt fees increase +5% and +2% in each 2026 and 2027. FRE in 2026 is +2% vs prior ests at $3,087m, and 2027 FRE increases by +1% to $3,836m. As such, we're looking for 208bps y/y FRE margin expansion to 58.7% in '26 (from 56.6% in '25) and further ~400bps expansion in 2027 to 62.7%. We see +20% annual FRE CAGR through '25-'28, +12% normalized SRE growth, and +16% EPS growth for the same time period.

Risk Reward – Apollo Global Management Inc (APO.N)

Poised for EPS acceleration, supported by benign credit & fading rate headwinds

PRICE TARGET $181.00

We value APO using a sum-of-the-parts, and back into implied 16x target multiple on 2027e EPS. Sum-of-the-parts reflects a 29x multiple on after-tax core fee related earnings, 8x on insurance earnings, and 8x on carry balance.

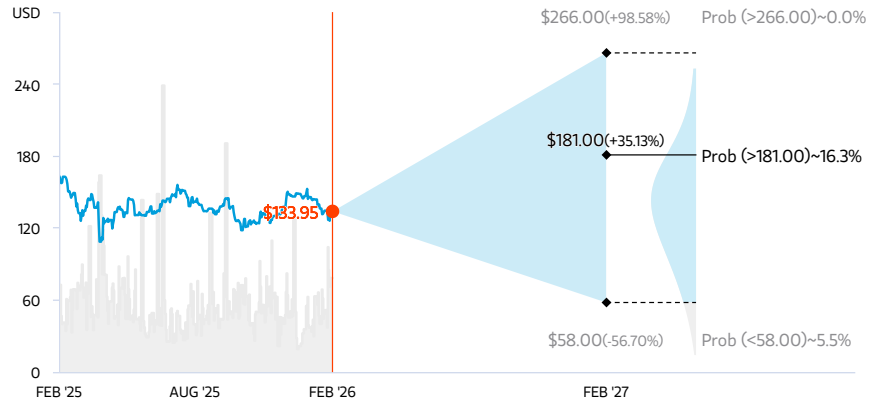
RISK REWARD CHART AND OPTIONS IMPLIED PROBABILITIES (12M)



Key: Historical Stock Performance ● Current Stock Price ◆ Price Target

Source: Refinitiv, Morgan Stanley Research, Morgan Stanley Institutional Equities Division. The probabilities of our Bull, Base, and Bear case scenarios playing out were estimated with implied volatility data from the options market as of 9 Feb 2026. All figures are approximate risk-neutral probabilities of the stock reaching beyond the scenario price in either three-months' or one-years' time. OVERWEIGHT THESIS

- Growth re-acceleration not in the price; see attractive mid-teens earnings CAGR that's underpinned by fading rate headwinds, supportive macro, secular rising allocations to alts & capital markets recovery.
- We're positive on FRE outlook ahead and look for consistent 20%+ FRE growth from 2025-27 supported by strong fundraising environment, accelerating capital markets activity, and upcoming fund activations
- See APO as a way to play private credit expansion, and expect SRE growth inflection as end of the Fed's rate cutting cycle approaches sees SRE spread stabilize. Strong insurance annuity asset growth supported by aging population dynamics and higher for longer rates outlook

BULL CASE $266.00

14.9x 2027e Bull Case EPS of $17.82

Returns more in-line with historical. Fundraising and deployment accelerates, 15% fee-paying AUM CAGR across '25-'27 to drive 43% FRE CAGR and 70% FRE margin by 2027e.

BASE CASE $181.00

15.9x 2027e Base Case EPS of $11.41

Below historical returns with rising allocations to alternatives: 12% fee-paying AUM CAGR from '25-'27 to drive 23% FRE CAGR for 63% FRE margin by 2027e.

BEAR CASE $58.00

7.8x 2027e Bear Case EPS of $7.40

Challenging exit and investing environment with valuation at floor value: returns well below historical average, delayed exits, slower capital deployment and weaker fundraising environment.

Certain disclosures listed above are also for compliance with applicable regulations in non-US jurisdictions.

STOCK RATINGS

Morgan Stanley uses a relative rating system using terms such as Overweight, Equal-weight, Not-Rated or Underweight (see definitions below). Morgan Stanley does not assign ratings of Buy, Hold or Sell to the stocks we cover. Overweight, Equal-weight, Not-Rated and Underweight are not the equivalent of buy, hold and sell. Investors should carefully read the definitions of all ratings used in Morgan Stanley Research. In addition, since Morgan Stanley Research contains more complete information concerning the analyst's views, investors should carefully read Morgan Stanley Research, in its entirety, and not infer the contents from the rating alone. In any case, ratings (or research) should not be used or relied upon as investment advice. An investor's decision to buy or sell a stock should depend on individual circumstances (such as the investor's existing holdings) and other considerations.

Global Stock Ratings Distribution

(as of January 31, 2026)

The Stock Ratings described below apply to Morgan Stanley's Fundamental Equity Research and do not apply to Debt Research produced by the Firm.

For disclosure purposes only (in accordance with FINRA requirements), we include the category headings of Buy, Hold, and Sell alongside our ratings of Overweight, Equal-weight, Not-Rated and Underweight. Morgan Stanley does not assign ratings of Buy, Hold or Sell to the stocks we cover. Overweight, Equal-weight, Not-Rated and Underweight are not the equivalent of buy, hold, and sell but represent recommended relative weightings (see definitions below). To satisfy regulatory requirements, we correspond Overweight, our most positive stock rating, with a buy recommendation; we correspond Equal-weight and Not-Rated to hold and Underweight to sell recommendations, respectively.

	Coverage Universe		Investment Banking Clients (IBC)			Other Material Investment Services Clients (MISC)
Stock Rating Category	Count	% of Total	Count	% of Total IBC	% of Rating Category	Count	% of Total Other MISC
